At this age of electronic information, it's a level of protection for the county and for those providing ALS First Responder Services as it is associated with the HIPAA rules as far as keeping medical information confidential. It is an effort to have an understanding between the county and the providers on what type of medical information is to be released and how it should be released.

Councilor Burke inquired if these requirements are part of the ACT or are they a restatement in the ACT? City Manager Edmunds explained because of the relationship with Pinellas County government and the providers, the city does comply with HIPAA requirements on the distribution of information. Since there is a partnership between the county and the providers, the county is seeking better protection with the providers and disbursement of the medical information.

Fire Chief Burford added since the system has gone to electronic data capture of patient care documentation in the last few years and because of that transition and the flow of information, the county has asked for this agreement to be put in place with its providers.
